NEXT-GEN RANGE ROVER REVEALED

First all-new model since 2013 promises modernity, refinement and even greater capability.

Land Rover have taken the covers off the new, fifth-generation version of their Range Rover, with the benchmark for luxury 4x4s taken to the next level.

While staying true to its heritage as a premium 4x4, the new Range Rover also looks to the future, with mild hybrid and plug-in hybrid options offered on the units to reach Australia next year, while a fully electric version is planned for release in 2024.

"The New Range Rover is a superb manifestation of our vision to create the world's most desirable luxury vehicles, for the most discerning of customers," said Thierry Bolloré, Chief Executive Officer, Jaguar Land Rover.

"It writes the next chapter in the unique story of pioneering innovation that has been a Range Rover hallmark for more than 50 years."

NEW BASE, FAMILIAR GRADES

While it looks outwardly similar to the existing Range Rover from some angles, the new version rolls on an all-new platform – Land Rover's 'MLA-Flex' modular architecture – that is said to underpin everything, from the 4x4's capability, to its "agile handling" and "peerless refinement".

The new Range Rover, like the current version, will be offered in standard wheelbase and long wheelbase bodies (with up to seven-seat capacity), along with familiar model grades of SE, HSE and Autobiography.

From launch, there'll also be a limited-run First Edition variant, which is based on the Autobiography grade and adds several unique features, including an exclusive Sunset Gold paint option.

Land Rover's Special Vehicle Operations (SVO) have also got their hands on the new version and will offer the Range Rover SV. Available in SWB and LWB styles like the standard Range Rover, the SV also offers two distinct design themes – SV Serenity and SV intrepid.

SIX, EIGHT AND TWO HYBRIDS

Powertrain options on the new Range Rover remain mostly unchanged, with six- and eight-cylinder engine offerings under the Ingenium banner, supported by a 48V mild hybrid system (MHEV), but there is a new extended range plug-in hybrid with an electric motor and battery pack.

Engine options start with a pair of carryover six-cylinder diesel units, both of 3.0-litre capacity and paired with an MHEV. The D300 version produces 221kW and 650Nm, while the D350 delivers 258kW and 700Nm.

Petrol engine options include the P400,

Wading depth is listed at 900mm.

The most significant design changes have been made at the rear.

which is a 3.0-litre six, also with MHEV mild hybrid assistance, producing 294kW and 550Nm. The lone example of purely internal combustion engine power is the P530. Replacing the previously offered 5.0-litre supercharged V8, this BMW-sourced 4.4-litre twin turbocharged petrol V8 produces 390kW and 750Nm.

On the mild hybrids, integral 'eHorizon' navigation data allows for optimised energy use over the duration of a journey. While not particularly relevant for Australia, this technology has applications in designated low emission zones in major British and European cities. It also prioritises EV mode for the last 6km of pre-set journeys in urban areas.

The all-new engine option is the P510e, which pairs the P400 3.0-litre six-cylinder petrol engine with a 105kW electric motor and 38.2kWh battery for a combined 375kW and 700Nm. On electric power alone, range is 100km, with 0-100km/h acceleration of 5.6 seconds. The battery for the P510e is packaged so it doesn't impact on the interior, so passenger space and luggage capacity are unaffected.

Common to all engine choices is an eight-speed automatic transmission, with high- and low-range, driving all four wheels through Land Rover's intelligent All-Wheel Drive (iAWD) system. This is controlled by Land Rover's Intelligent Driveline Dynamics (IDD) system, which monitors grip levels and driver inputs to predictively distribute torque between the front and rear axles, as well as across the rear axle, to optimise traction on and off-road.

STILL CAPABLE

According to Land Rover, the version of the MLA-Flex platform under the new Range Rover delivers even greater refinement and capability.

The advanced Integrated Chassis Control (ICC) system tailors the vehicle dynamics to suit the driving style and surface conditions, while all-wheel steering allows improved manoeuvrability at low speeds, greater stability at high speeds and tightens the turning circle to 11 square metres.

New to the Range Rover with this generation is the Dynamic Response Pro electronic roll control system that's faster and more efficient than conventional hydraulic systems, while fully independent electronic air suspension - paired with adaptive dampers - is standard and is said to be more refined with this generation, controlled by the Adaptive Dynamics software.

An Active Locking rear diff is standard, as is Land Rover's Terrain Response 2 system that offers six different driving modes to suit various surface conditions. This adjusts automatically to provide the perfect settings to suit the terrain, but can also be adjusted manually. There's a configurable option, too, allowing the driver to select their preferred chassis set-up.

All standard wheelbase models offer 295mm of ground clearance and 510mm of wheel articulation, while LWB bodies drop the former to 294mm. Wading depth is listed at an impressive 900mm, and when Wade Mode is selected on the Terrain Response 2, a wade sensing function allows the driver to see the depth of surrounding water on the centre touchscreen.

Approach/departure/breakover angles are 34.7 degrees, 29.0 degrees and 27.2 degrees respectively. The latter angle drops to 25.2 degrees on the LWB body.

Towing capacity is listed at 3,500kg (braked) and maximum roof load is 100kg.

MODERNIST DESIGN

While still recognisably a Range Rover, especially when viewed from the front, the new version has been tweaked in several areas of its design, with an overall sleeker appearance that removes the bulk and bulges seen on some contemporary rivals.

Familiar styling touches include the falling roofline at the rear and waist-level character line that runs the length of the body. The front quarter 'vents' that were moved to the door and made bolder on the fourth-generation Land Rover have been simplified for the fifth-generation, while another notable element of the new Range Rover's profile is the introduction of flush-mounted door handles.

A similar approach has been taken with the side glass and there's no wraparound treatment of the tail lights. The result is a claimed drag co-efficient of 0.30, which is amazing for a vehicle of this size. Land Rover claim the new Range Rover is the most aerodynamically-efficient luxury SUV in the world.

At the front end, the distinctive Range Rover headlights remain, but they've been slimmed down and simplified, with a similar approach taken for the lower grille opening; now a single rectangle, with various configurations of horizontal bars (depending on model grade) that house the foglamps. This is part of a strong horizontal styling theme that extends to the grille pattern.

The grille now features a bolder U-shaped surround, but the prominent Range Rover badging on the bonnet's leading edge is unchanged.

At the rear, the Range Rover badging also remains prominent, but there's been significantly more change compared to the front end. The vertically stacked 'cube'

A more exclusive offering, Australian availability and pricing for the Range Rover SV was unrevealed at time of writing.

Interior restyling has been driven by the same horizontal themes and minimalism applied to the exterior.

Styling tweaks include reshaped door 'vent' panels and flush-mounted door handles.

tail lights have been replaced by a single vertical strip behind smoked lenses. These simplified tail lights are linked to a full-width horizontal bar to create the inverse of the grille's U-shaped surround.

The kick-up of the Range Rover's rear bumper remains, but it's more subtle on the new version and appears not to project as far as the tailgate, but it does – just.

Inside, the design is technology-driven, with materials and innovations chosen to create what Land Rover call “a calm sanctuary for all occupants”.

The horizontal theme from the exterior dominates the front of the cabin, broken up by the floating central touchscreen, while the steering wheel features horizontal spokes.

Seating is premium, offering comfort and stability, while third-row occupants on 7-seat variants get raised ‘stadium seating’.

Recognising the move away from leather for some customers, interior trim options include Kvadrat, a wool-blend fabric, and non-animal Ultrafabrics that are highly tactile.

MORE TECH

Unsurprisingly, given its premium positioning, the new Range Rover is loaded with technologies to improve efficiency, convenience, refinement and safety.

The latest version of Land Rover's

Electrical Vehicle Architecture (EVA 2.0) includes software-over-the-air updates, so upgraded tech can easily be incorporated as it becomes available.

Amazon Alexa voice control is introduced and works with existing Apple CarPlay and Android Auto compatibility (both wireless), while also able to communicate with other Alexa-enabled devices in the home.

The Pivi Pro infotainment system now features a larger 13.1-inch touchscreen with a smartphone-inspired interface and also introduces haptic feedback when the screen is touched.

Below this screen are traditional tactile switches for the climate controls, while a chunky shift lever for the transmission, engine stop/start button, driving mode selector and a wireless charge pad feature on the broad transmission tunnel.

For the driver, there's a 13.7-inch digital display, which features new high-def graphics and is based around a three-panel layout. Multiple display options are available, including one mimicking a traditional analogue gauge layout.

The sound system is a 1600W Meridian Signature set-up, which includes speakers in the first- and second-row seat headrests that can also work with the Range Rover's Gen3 Active Noise Cancellation system to create personal “quiet zones”.

A new Rear Seat Entertainment system has been introduced for second-row passengers that adds a pair of 11.4-inch HD touchscreens to the front seatbacks that support most devices and allow smart TV viewing using the vehicle's built-in WiFi hotspot.

Cabin Air Purification Pro is standard, which reduces allergens and pathogens in the cabin and works with other technologies to enhance air quality.

LED lighting features all round, with high-def digital headlights, adaptive front lighting and technology that adjusts the light beam to illuminate upcoming corners and bends.

New manoeuvring lights provide a carpet of light around the Range Rover's perimeter and work with the 3D Surround Camera system to illuminate the vehicle's immediate surroundings in low-light conditions.

A final tech touch is Remote Park Assist, which allows the driver to manoeuvre the vehicle into and out of tight spaces via their smartphone without actually being inside.

PREMIUM PRODUCT

Australian pricing for the new Range Rover starts at an eye-watering $220,000, rising to $312,500 in P530 First Edition form (pricing excludes ORCs).

Land Rover dealers are taking orders now, ahead of mid-2022 delivery.

Seven-seat capacity is available in the Autobiography LWB grade.

LWB variants improve rear seat space.

MELBOURNE 4X4 SHOW RESCHEDULED TO 2022

Despite some easing of COVID-19 restrictions in Victoria, organisers of the National 4x4 Outdoors Show, Fishing & Boating Expo in Melbourne have made the decision to cancel the 2021 show and reschedule for 2022.

Originally to take place on 20-22 August, July's COVID lockdown in Victoria led to a cancellation of that original date and new dates of 26-27 November put in place. These dates have now also been abandoned, with the show rescheduled to 19-21 August, 2022.

The decision to pull the pin on this year's Melbourne show was made in mid-October, with the event organisers saying their hand was forced by ongoing uncertainties over density limits, vaccine mandates and other COVID-related considerations for both visitors and exhibitors.

The 2022 National 4x4 Outdoors Show, Fishing & Boating Expo will still be held at the Melbourne Showgrounds in Ascot Vale, which has multiple outdoor and indoor exhibition spaces, ensuring flexibility to deal with various COVID requirements, should they still be a factor by next August.

The event will run with a COVID-safe plan, which may include requirements like pre-purchase tickets, limited ticket availability and staggered entry times to reduce on-site numbers.

Information will be updated as the situation around COVID-19 in 2022 becomes clearer.

With a much longer lead-time now in place, the mix of features for the 2022 National 4x4 Outdoors Show, Fishing & Boating Expo in Melbourne are still to be determined, but expect regular attractions, including interviews and talks at the popular Outback Stage, cook-ups at the Catch & Cook Stage, the Action Arena and more to carry over to next year.

The all-new Show N Shine, where owners of four-wheel drive rigs of all types can win some great prizes, is expected to finally make its debut in 2022.

Of course, there'll be an abundance of stallholders with the latest and greatest 4x4 products and related gear for camping, adventuring, fishing, boating and enjoying the great outdoors.

For event updates, visit 4x4show.com.au follow the event's social media channels or sign up to the event newsletter.

NEW TICKET RELEASE FOR 2022 MUNDI MUNDI BASH

Following the rescheduling of the inaugural Mundi Mundi Bash from August, 2021, to April, 2022, a small number of refunded tickets have been released, allowing those who missed out the first time the opportunity to get to the three-day music festival.

The re-released tickets went on sale on 27

October, and like the initial ticket allocation, are expected to sell out quick.

"Mundi Mundi Bash tickets sold like hot cakes when we first put them on-sale in March 2021," explained Festival owner and Managing Director of the Outback Music Festival Group Greg Donovan.

"Despite the pandemic just starting to take hold there was a huge appetite for the event and all tickets sold out in just one month. Since then, we've been on a rollercoaster ride with COVID, meaning we had no choice but to move the event to April 2022."

While the majority of ticket holders opted to retain their tickets for the new date, Donovan said some chose to refund their tickets, leading to the re-issue.

The new date for the Mundi Mundi Bash - April 21-23, 2022 - falls within the NSW Easter school holidays, allowing the entire family to attend the all-ages, dog-friendly music festival on the Mundi Mundi Plains, 9km north of Silverton, with camping on site and the Barrier Ranges as a backdrop.

The all-star line-up includes Paul Kelly, Ian Moss, John Williamson, Kate Ceberano, Russell Morris, Glenn Shorrock, Ross Wilson, Vika & Linda, Wendy Matthews, Shane Howard, Shannon Noll, Dragon, The Radiators, Chocolate Starfish, Mi-Sex, The Chantoozies, Bjorn Again, Mark Gable, Steve Balbi and Caitlyn Shadbolt.

Beyond the live music, other activities for the Mundi Mundi Bash include a Nutbush City Limits World Record dance off attempt, a Mundi Undie Run charity fundraiser race, comedy performers, outdoor film screenings, scenic helicopter flights, camel rides and a Mad Max dress up day.

Sunshine Motorhome

A group of Dutch students have taken the idea of a traditional motorhome and turned it on its head.

WORDS Mike Ryan | PHOTOS Mobilize – Renault Group

Electric motoring is well and truly here, but for all its cleaner, greener benefits, EVs still need to plug into the electricity grid. But could a solar-powered car – and a solar-powered motorhome at that – become a reality? A group of university students believe so and recently showed that it's closer than you think.

For motorhome owners, especially here in Australia, the requirement to be never too far away from a petrol station is a constant. Despite lightweight materials and clever construction methods, the very nature of motorhomes means they aren't overly fuel-efficient, nor are they aerodynamic. But with the abundance of sunshine in Australia, some of those inefficiencies could be overcome if the motorhome was able to run on solar power.

DUTCH TREAT

Recently, a group of 22 students from the Eindhoven University of Technology in the Netherlands, working under the banner of 'Solar Team,' unveiled a motorhome that breaks many of the accepted rules of motorhome design.

Dubbed 'Stella Vita,' what the students created was a fully-functional EV motorhome that can be powered by solar energy, or via conventional plug-in electricity.

Solar Team have some history in this space, building solar-powered cars that have been successful at the biennial Bridgestone World Solar Challenge from Darwin to Adelaide. Back in 2019, the Dutch students achieved their fourth successive win in the 'Cruiser Cup' section of the event for cars that are more practical and closer to production reality.

For the Stella Vita, Solar Team took a similar approach and what is very much a form-follows-function design ethos, ensuring the vehicle was not only as energy efficient as possible, but still practical for use as a motorhome.

The sleek shape features a shallow windscreen that flows into a long and broad roof space that's made up entirely of solar panels. Ground-hugging aerodynamics up front and faired-in wheels at the rear play a part in reducing energy expenditure, as

While technical problems meant a planned 3,000km drive didn't happen, Stella Vita's creators claim a range of up to 730km on electric power.

Aerodynamic design is unlike any conventional motorhome, to maximise efficiency of the EV drivetrain.

Inside, Stella Vita is equipped with a bed, lounge and kitchenette, while the cooking, entertainment and washing facilities are all solar-powered.

While access to the interior of Stella Vita is a little unusual, what is inside the camper has been well thought out.

Pop-up roof allows standing room inside, while secondary solar panels double the energy harvesting capacity.

does overall weight of 1,700kg. Of course, that low ground clearance limits the Stella Vita to near-perfect tarmac – not great for Aussie road conditions!

That aero also makes the Stella Vita reasonably quick, with a claimed top speed of 120km/h, while an integral 60kWh lithium-ion battery delivers range of 600km from a full charge and up to 730km in ideal conditions if solar power is harnessed and used to fuel the battery along the way.

Not forgetting the requirements for motorhome comfort when parked, up, the Stella Vita's large solar panel roof pops up to allow stand-up access inside, while a pair of pull-out side awnings provide shade and carry additional solar panels. Total area of the solar panels is up to 17.5 square metres with all three deployed, but the Achilles

Heel of the design – for now – is the slow recharge rate of the battery using solar panels alone, which can be as much as three days. As such, the Stella Vita is also set up to allow recharging from conventional (and presumably fast-charge) outlets.

It should be clarified that this is no hybrid system. Stella Vita is purely electric and designed to run primarily on electricity harvested from the sun, with no internal combustion engine taking over when battery power drops off.

Solar energy harvested from the roof panels is also used to power devices within the motorhome, not just the vehicle itself. These include built-in cooking, entertainment and hot water facilities for washing, as well as being used to recharge phones.

GET THE RIGHT OIL FOR YOUR VEHICLE INSTANTLY

IT'S MORE THAN JUST OIL.
IT'S LIQUID ENGINEERING.

Importantly, the camper's integral infotainment system allows energy consumption to be seen in real-time, thus enabling greater control over the rate at which electricity is used.

The interior of Stella Vita is fully fitted-out with a double bed, sofa, small dining table, kitchen and toilet, as well as an abundance of storage, with the interior accessed by large barn doors on the offside.

EUROPEAN TOUR

To prove the real-world viability of a solar-powered motorhome, members of Solar Team intended to take Stella Vita on a 3,000km road trip from their base in the Netherlands to Tarifa - the southernmost point in Spain – using solar energy exclusively.

Unfortunately, technical issues with the drivetrain meant the journey was not completed as intended, but Solar Team did get to Paris, where they were invited by senior members of Renault's design team, including representatives of Renault's new 'Mobilize' EV sub-brand, to present their EV motorhome at the Renault Technocentre.

Renault and Mobilize executives and Even with the pop-up roof raised, Stella Vita has comparable external dimensions to existing motorhomes.

Secondary solar panels double as awnings.

designers were impressed with the innovation behind Stella Vita and say they will incorporate some of what Solar Team created into development of new, bold and sustainable mobility solutions of their own in the future.

Laurens van den Acker, Head of Design for Renault Group, was particularly impressed, given he had previously studied at the Eindhoven University of Technology, and welcomed the students into the Technocentre, where they were shown concepts created by Renault and Mobilize.

Patrick Lecharpy, VP of Design at Mobilize, talked to the Solar Team students about the original aspects of the creative process behind the brand's vehicles. Lecharpy explained that, at Mobilize, they use a creative approach to design that differs from that used by more traditional brands. Mobilize designers do not start out by drawing a vehicle; rather, they think about the overall experience of sustainable mobility and services that could assist not only users, but also operators and cities as a whole.

SUNNY FUTURE

While the European Tour in Stella Vita didn't go to plan, Solar Team's meeting with Renault and Mobilize designers provided the beginning of an answer to the question: will we soon be able to drive vehicles that are powered solely by the sun's rays?

The students at Solar Team think so and believe that Stella Vita is an early manifestation of solar mobility that could become a reality by 2030. But they concede that major technological developments in photovoltaics and batteries will be needed for large-scale deployment.

For local motorhome enthusiasts, the idea of a solar-powered camper for doing a lap of Australia without ever having to pull into a petrol station sounds ideal!

Solar Team is a 22-member group of students who have built past winners in the biennial World Solar Challenge.

Find out which vehicle type is the best for you.

The 'big car for a big country' has been replaced by the crossover and SUV, with SUV often being used as a blanket term to describe vehicles like the Ford Everest 4WD and even smaller non-4WDs. If you're in the market for a new family car, then it's likely you've asked yourself, 'what's the difference?'. Simple.

A crossover is generally a car-platform-based vehicle that's 'crossing over' from the fuel efficiency of a car to the practicality of an SUV. This means it might ride a little higher and be a little roomier but it will often still just be a front- or rear-wheel drive vehicle. And this is where the grey area begins.

The term SUV (Sports Utility Vehicle) is often used as a blanket term to describe everything from crossovers to off-road-ready, body-on-frame 4x4s like the Ford Everest 4WD. But, in the US, where the term originated, it's used expressly to describe traditional 4WDs, like the Everest. This means, in the strict sense of the term, that all 4x4s are SUVs, but not all SUVs are 4x4s.

But we're not in the US and so the term 'SUV' is generally used in Australia to describe vehicles positioned mid-way between a car-based crossover and full-time four-wheel drive. A good example is the Subaru Outback; a vehicle combining increased ground clearance with permanent all-wheel drive.

But, if you're looking for a new family car that's safe, practical and capable when the bitumen runs out, or if you want to tow a trailer, then a 'proper' 4x4, like the Ford Everest is the way to go.

Here are the top reasons for buying a 4x4 instead of a crossover/SUV:

1. Off-Road/Rough Road Capability:

You might never, ever drive your 4x4 across anything more difficult than a rough track down to a river to go fishing, but at least with a 4x4, you'll know you can head into the Outback or onto a beach. Even a shallow water crossing (400mm) could mean the end of a crossover, but in a four-wheel drive, like the Ford Everest 4x4 with its 800mm wading depth, you'll be fine. A 4x4 is better equipped for dealing with corrugated dirt roads, too, thanks to its strong body-on-frame construction, rugged suspension componentry and light-truck tyres. Grip is also greatly improved in all driving conditions thanks to permanent, dual-range four-wheel drive. Most crossovers are front-wheel drive only and are thus not intended for rough-road driving.

2. Towing: 4x4s make for the best towing platforms on the market. As an example, the Ford Everest offers up to 3100kg braked towing capacity and a 300kg towball download capacity as well as dealer-fit electric brake controller which is integrated with the active safety suite. This 3-tonne braked towing capacity generally exceeds any crossover or SUV you might consider. It also features potentially life-saving active safety features like Trailer Sway Control which can help to mitigate the effects of the trailer's lateral movement on the towing vehicle.

3. Visibility: This is usually the main reason people give for wanting a crossover/SUV/4WD. But it's usually only actually true of a 'proper' 4x4. The Ford Everest 4x4 offers the driver a nice, high-set driving position (and being able to see the bonnet edges, which is great when off-roading), as well as 227mm of ground clearance compared with the usual 140mm ground clearance of a crossover. This means you can travel further off-road. Then there's the Everest's reversing camera, which offers a nice clear image and wide field of view. It also offers dynamic lines to show the angle the vehicle is reversing on and, when you have the cost-optional towing pack fitted, adds a line that shoots out from the towbar allowing you to reverse right up to the trailer easily.

Ford's Everest, with its standard dual-range four-wheel drive and tough body-on-frame construction, can take you well off the beaten track.

4. Safety: Like most crossovers and SUVs, it's very rare for a large 4x4 these days not to score a five-star ANCAP rating. That said, all else being equal, a heavier car generally fares better in a crash than a lighter vehicle. Gone are the days when 4x4s were top heavy, unwieldy vehicles on the road, with little to no safety tech. That's changed a lot in the past decade or so, and while there are still some low-tech holdouts in the marketplace, modern, family-focussed 4x4s, like the Ford Everest (depending on the variant) are equipped with the latest active safety equipment. This includes lane keeping assistance, blind spot monitoring, trailer sway control, an abundance of airbags and much more.

5. Modifications: You may not want to fit a winch, but you may want to add a roof rack, a cargo shelf system or a bullbar/nudge bar to mount driving lights. All these items are available off the shelf from the dealer, for popular four-wheel drives like the Ford Everest 4x4, but are difficult to find for crossovers and SUVs.

In the end, the vehicle you choose comes down to what you need it to do. But, if you need something roomy, built strong, safe, and capable when the going gets tough, then a "proper" four-wheel drive should be at the top of your shopping list.

Toyota's 70 Series LandCruiser may be basic, but in terms of off-road ability, it's hard to beat.

WORKING THE ANGLES

If you're planning on driving off the beaten track, like rough trails and river crossings, choosing a 4x4 with good ground clearance is a major consideration.

WORDS practicalmotoring.com.au | PHOTOS Various

Ground clearance is generally determined by parking your vehicle on a flat surface, like a concrete driveway, and measuring the distance between that and the lowest part of your vehicle. On a 4WD, this is usually determined by measuring up from the ground to the rear diff (and sometimes the front diff) pumpkin.

Increased ground clearance is a trade-off between practicality and performance, meaning while, with a high ground clearance, you'll be able to negotiate rougher terrain without scraping vital parts of your vehicle against the ground, you'll also have a much less aerodynamic vehicle than, say, a sports car, and your centre of gravity will be higher.

But aerodynamics and on-the-limit handling are not the goal of 4WDs. Rather, it's about being able to wave goodbye to the blacktop and explore the great outdoors. So, if you're planning on driving along mud ruts or in the sand, then you'll want as much clearance as your 4WD will allow.

That said, most 4WDs are built tough underneath, with vulnerable bits hidden or protected behind bash plates for when you run out of clearance and belly out on a track.

In terms of the Ford Everest, it offers an impressive wading ability of 800mm and ground clearance of 227mm, departure angle of 25-degrees, approach angle of 29.5 degrees and a rampover of 21.5 degrees which place it at the top or very near the top of its class, depending on the measurement.

THE BEST SET-UP FOR DIFFERENT TERRAINS

There's more to ground clearance than just how far off the ground your 4WD sits. Rather, you should think about it as being more than that, because your 4WD's angles (approach, departure and ramp over – explained below) also determine the off-road ability of your vehicle. As does how well your vehicle's suspension can flex and thus keep its wheels on the ground in undulating terrain.

And which element is more important to you will depend on the sort of terrain you'll be spending most of your time on.

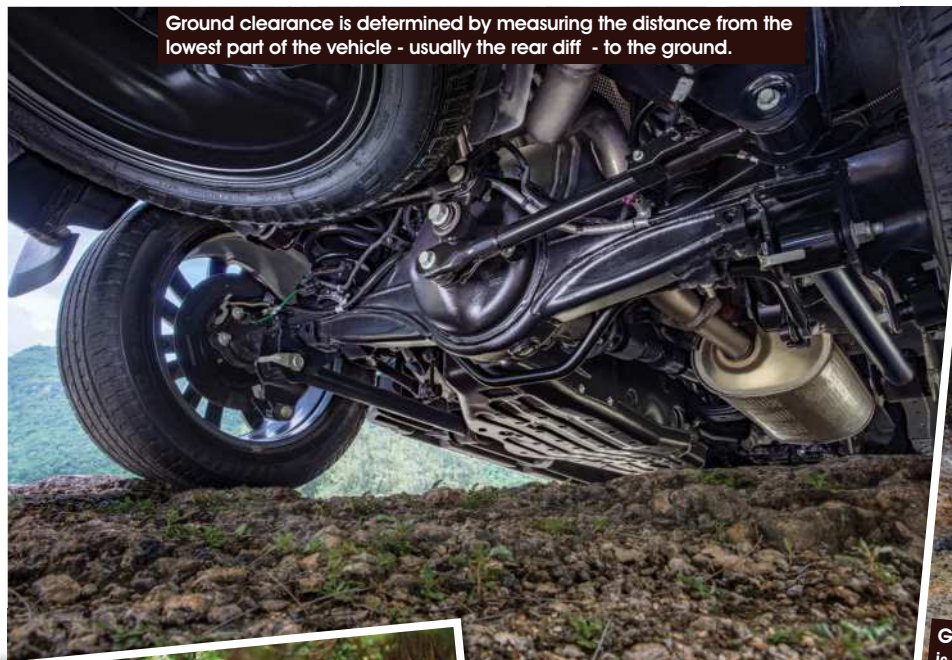

Using rock crawling as an example, while ground clearance is still very important here, it's less important than having plenty of articulation and a locking differential for when you run out of articulation and lift a wheel off the ground. But when you're driving in mud or on sand, then clearance becomes the priority rather than articulation.

So, in an ideal world you'll want a 4WD with a good level of ground clearance, at least 220mm (the Ford Everest offers 227mm), good approach, departure and ramp over angles and decent articulation, or the ability to keep your 4WD's wheels on the ground for longer when travelling across uneven terrain.

MAKING THE MOST OF WHAT YOU'VE GOT

To ensure your 4x4's ground clearance is maintained when driving off-road, drivers should ensure they're driving as slow as possible but as fast as necessary for the terrain. This will ensure minimal suspension compression and thus minimal loss of ground clearance. And drivers

Ground clearance is determined by measuring the distance from the lowest part of the vehicle - usually the rear diff - to the ground.

Ground clearance on the current Jeep Wrangler is a class-leading 252mm.

Knowing your vehicle's ground clearance (273mm in the case of the latest Nissan Patrol) helps when deciding whether to straddle that ridge or drive along the edge of it.

While ground clearance and wading depth are two separate measures, high ground clearance on a 4x4 usually translates to a high wading depth, too.

should ensure they 'pick a line' across an obstacle to ensure they don't run out of ground clearance (like driving around the big rock in the middle of the track rather than hoping you'll clear it when you drive over it), or you might even have to build up a track using rocks or traction ramps to improve your 4WD's approach angle to ensure the tyres are able to grip the surface in particularly lumpy terrain. With a 4x4, you want to ensure that, as often as possible, only your vehicle's tyres are touching the ground.

WHAT ARE APPROACH, DEPARTURE AND RAMP OVER ANGLES?

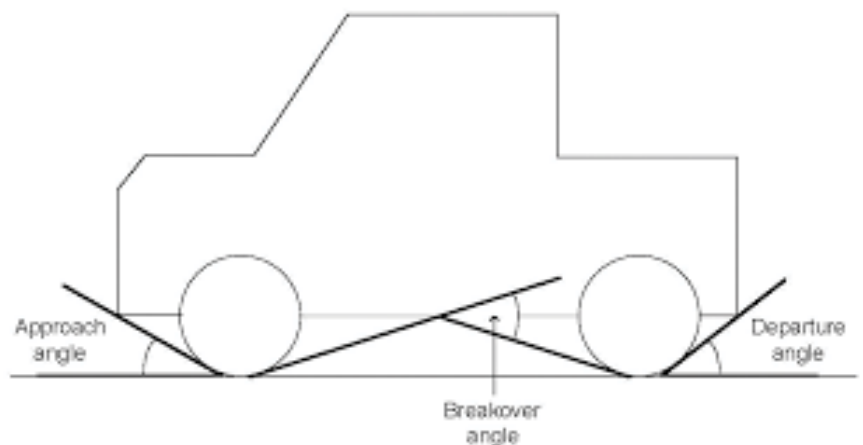

An approach angle is defined as being the maximum ramp angle a vehicle can travel up from a flat surface without rubbing its nose. If you look at your 4WD in profile, imagine a line running on an angle from the front of the front tyre and the lowest hanging part of your vehicle. The departure angle of your 4WD is the same line drawn from the back of the back tyres to the lowest part of the rear of the vehicle.

The approach and departure angles of your 4WD are affected most by the front and rear overhang of your vehicle, which is determined by how much of your vehicle juts out ahead of the tyres.

Ramp over angle is, as the name suggests, the maximum ramp angle your 4x4 can travel over, with the front wheels on one side of the ramp's apex and the back wheels on the other side, without the apex touching the underneath of the 4WD.

See the graphic below for a simplified visual explanation.

ON PATROL

The Nissan Patrol arrived here in 1960 with the G60 and has been a firm favourite ever since.

The Second World War had ravaged Japan, leaving many of its roads and towns in ruin. Like many other countries at the time, Japan turned to its automotive industry - as small as it was - to get the country moving.

It asked the likes of Toyota and Nissan to create a utility vehicle in the same vein as the Jeep.

THE NISSAN 4W60 WAS BORN - 1951-1960

Nissan's response was the 4W Series which, like all 4x4s at the time, was slow, primitive and nothing more than a small step ahead of a tractor. Toyota won the contract, but that didn't stop Nissan. The company thought it had a winner on its hands and pushed on, rolling out the first production 4WD in September, 1951. The '4W' Series lasted until 1960 and was exported to Russia and South America.

The first-generation 4W60 ran a 3.7-litre NAK six-cylinder producing 55kW, mated to a four-speed manual and four-wheel drive. The 4W60 soldiered on until 1955 when the 4W61 came into production.

The 4W61 introduced a new engine, a 3.7-litre Nissan NB six that made 68kW (it would later be replaced by a 78kW 4.0-litre Nissan NC engine). Other changes for the 4W61 included a one-piece windscreen, chrome strips on the bonnet, a passenger seat that was wider than the driver's seat and a badge on the grille that said, Nissan.

In 1958 the 4W65 arrived and copped some styling changes, including a new bonnet and front wheel arches, as well as the first appearance of 'Patrol' badges, reflecting the name Nissan were now applying to their 4x4 workhorse.

In 1959, the 4W66 arrived with a grunter engine, the 4.0-litre Nissan P engine which thumped out 93kW. This variant was discontinued in June 1960.

The 4W66 made way for the 4W73 released in 1959. It was the most powerful Patrol at the time with a 108kW engine based on that in the 4W66. It also received upgrades to the grille, bonnet, headlights and wheel arches.

THE NISSAN G60 - FIRST VEHICLE TO CROSS THE SIMPSON DESERT - 1960-1980

The 4W Series did what it needed to do... It paved the way for the second-generation 'Patrol' the G60 Series which arrived in 1960 and stayed in production until 1980. Imported to Australia, the G60 became the first vehicle to cross the Simpson Desert, driven by geologist Reg Sprigg. Taking 12 days, the crossing was only the second by a European. The first was by Captain Ted Colson and his indigenous guide, Peter Ains, and their camels in 1936.

In 1962, the Sprigg family (oh yes, it was mum, dad and two kids) averaged just 5km/h as they pioneered a track between and across the dunes, often getting 'beached' on giant saltbush outcrops and risking disaster as it began to smoulder under their 44 gallon (200 litre) drum of petrol.

The Sprigg family went back to the Simpson in 1967 and drove the 'French Line' and the Simpson Desert. It was only the third full crossing for both.

The G60 was offered in both short- and long- wheelbase set-ups. The Nissan P engine continued in the G60, and the transmission started out as a three-speed; with a two-speed transfer case and part-time four-wheel drive system. Later models saw the introduction of a four-speed transmission.

The 60 Patrol didn't change much over the years, with the only upgrades of note being power-assisted front drum brakes and a third windscreen wiper! There was, however, a real improvement in 1980 with the G61 Patrol which was basically the 60-body sitting on MQ Patrol running gear, including a full synchro four-speed manual gearbox, improved engine and better seating.

While overlooked by the Japanese Government after WWII, the Nissan Patrol was eventually pressed into military service in 1969, when a new variant, known as the Jonga, became the light transport of choice for the Indian Army.

THIRD-GENERATION PATROL, THE MQ - 1980 - 1987

The third-gen Patrol saw leaf springs front and back become standard, while for the first time, Australian buyers had a choice of engines - 2.8- and 4.0-litre petrol or 3.3-litre diesel - as well as 'luxury' items like a carpeted interior and, wait for it, air-conditioning and power steering.

As soon as the MQ hit the showroom an update was released (1981). It saw several new body styles added to the Patrol line-up, as well as a new limited slip diff and optional automatic transmission.

In 1983, the MQ emerged from plastic surgery with new rectangular head lights and upgrades to the front suspension. The four-speed manual was upgraded to five speeds and the SD33 diesel engine, in Australia, was given a 12V electric system. A turbocharged diesel was also offered.

Then in 1986, the five-speed manual became standard across the range along with power steering, and the suspension was upgraded with leaf springs.

FOURTH-GENERATION PATROL, THE Y60 (THE MIGHTY GQ) - 1987-1997

The GQ saw leaf springs replaced by coil springs, a redesign meant more room inside and more creature comforts, too, including a radio, clock and tachometer as standard. The GQ Y60 also saw the introduction of a five-link rear axle and rear disc brakes, while some models added a limited-slip differential, as well as vacuum operated rear differential locks. A PTO-driven winch was also offered as a cost option on some models of Patrol.

An update in 1990, saw the Patrol take the 'luxury' fight up to the Toyota LandCruiser with the launch of the Patrol Ti and the addition of, wait for it, chrome trim, and the more useful rear diff locks, two-way freewheeling hubs, power windows, electric mirrors, central locking and even a sunroof. Then, in 1991, the high-roofed Patrol Ti made way for a boxier looking low-roof wagon body.

The Nissan boffins were busy behind the scenes, because in 1992 a refreshed (meaning facelift) GQ Series 2 was released. Not only did this model see the introduction of a 4.2L engine with fuel injection, but the transmission and suspension were "refined". The GQ Series 2 got bigger brakes, bigger wheels and limited-slip diffs and auto freewheeling hubs became standard across the range. One small safety update was the introduction of side intrusion bars, and to stand out from the rest of the Patrol family the Ti copped a chrome front grille.

A very, very, very minor update in 1995 saw the centre "v" in the grille made a little smaller. It was a case of, if it ain't broke...

FIFTH-GENERATION PATROL, THE Y61 (THE POWER HOUSE GU) - 1997 TO NOW

Between 1992 and 1996, the Patrol had only received a minor refresh, then in 1997 came the Y61 (GU) and a smoother, more rounded body shape and a chunkier "v" grille. More significantly, besides this model's longevity, was the availability of a range of engines: 4.5L petrol; 2.8L turbo-diesel; 3.0L turbo-diesel; and 4.2L turbo-diesel. There were seven-seat options, and some markets even received a pick-up version. The Patrol's TB48DE engine could be pushed hard, with reports of some tuning the thing up to 2000hp...

The millennium bug was a major disappointment with computers everywhere clicking over from 1999 to 2000 just fine. The Patrol copped a new engine, a 3.0L four-cylinder turbo-diesel offering 116kW and 354Nm of torque. New front seats were also fitted.

A year later in 2001, the Y61 Series 3 arrived and brought with it a 4.2-litre petrol engine enlarged to 4.8 litres, now making 185kW/420Nm and mated to a five-speed automatic transmission with manual shift mode. It also copped a new grille, headlights, tail lights, bumpers, side mouldings, side steps, wheels and body colours... basically, everything that you could see.

In 2004, the seven-seat Patrol copped a total refresh with every panel, besides the roof, tweaked in some way. The interior was given a refresh, too, with new seats, trim, console and new door handles. Satellite navigation and a reversing camera were also offered.

From 2004 to 2012, the Patrol went through a further five series upgrades, although most of them were minor tweaks indeed. Probably the most significant was the standardisation of the 3.0L turbo-diesel across the range. In 2012, the Series 8 Y61 arrived sporting Nissan's vehicle dynamics control, rear differential locks and active brake limited slip.

By now, the Y61 had been on-sale for 14 years... and would continue to sell alongside the Y62 introduced in 2013 to Australia, and for good reason... no diesel engine.

SIXTH-GENERATION PATROL, THE Y62 (THE LUXURY 4X4) - 2013 TO NOW

Patrol owners viewed the coming of a new Patrol with excitement, but in 2013 when the petrol-only Y62 went on-sale, many owners decided to stick with their diesel Y61s. And fair enough.

But there's no doubting the Y62 was easily the most sophisticated Patrol to date. The 5.6-litre V8 offered 298kW and 560Nm of torque with 90% of torque available from just 1600rpm. An eight-speed automatic transmission was mated to this engine.

The Y62 saw the debut of Nissan's new ALL MODE 4x4 system which is controlled via a circular electronic switch cluster located behind the gear selector and offering modes (throttle, transmission and suspension tweaks) for: sand, rock, snow or on-road driving, activation of the rear differential lock, VDC on/off and Hill Descent Control. The ALL MODE 4X4 controller also allows the driver to select between 4H and 4L. The Y62 Patrol also featured Hill Start Assist and a helical limited slip differential.

Changes to the suspension also came with the Y62, including the arrival of Hydraulic Body Motion Control, while the four-wheel independent suspension saw hydraulic chambers included in each shock absorber to automatically control suspension action. From launch, Y62 Patrol pricing started at $82,690 for the ST-L, rising to $114,490 for the Ti-L.

Interestingly, by 2021, the Patrol's starting price had actually dropped, with the Ti from $81,160 and the Ti-L $94,115 (plus ORCs).

PATROL PONTS OF SIGNIFICANCE

- 1951 - 4W60 Patrol produced to help rebuild Japan.
- 1960 - G60 Patrol introduced to Australia
- 1976 - Nissan Patrol Club of NSW and ACT formed.
- 1980 - MQ Patrol released.
- 1983 - Datsun brand replaced by Nissan
- 1986 - 5-speed manual transmission for the MQ
- 1988 - GQ Patrol introduced, causes commotion with coil springs. Ford's Maverick, a rebadged version of the GQ, is released in the same year.
- 1994 - Coil sprung Patrol ute available.
- 1998 - GU Patrol introduced with 2.8tdi, 4.2 diesel, or 4.5l petrol engine. Ford Maverick line not continued with the GU, and no more SWBs.
- 1999 - Renault buys 36% of Nissan. Factory turbo for 4.2L turbo-diesel in wagon. Cab chassis available with 4.2 diesel, turbo or not turbo, leaf or coil rear.
- 2000 - GU II released. Popular ZD30 3.0tdi available, replacing 2.8tdi. Patrol driven to victory in the Outback Challenge for the first time.
- 2001 - GU III released with refined ZD30 engine.
- 2003 - ST-L Patrol released with standard ABS, leather and dual airbags. ST-L also available in diesel. Ti spec still only available in petrol. The 4.2 diesel gets an intercooler good for 30Nm more torque, ST gets cruise control. Ti loses rear locker, gets LSD. Automatic transmission available on DX Patrol.
- 2005 - Minor enhancements to ZD30 engine (3.4% more power, 7.3% more torque). Looks the same but many panels changed, new interior, sat-nav. ST-S grade added. Patrols place first, second and third in the Outback Challenge.
- 2006 - 3.0tdi Patrol available in Ti spec. Dual airbags standard on FX.
- 2007 - 4.2 diesel discontinued, minor upgrades to the rest of the range including refinements to the ZD30 for Euro4 emissions.
- 2013 - Y61 Patrol replaced with Y62 Patrol.

ONE MILLION GOOD REASONS...

(TO CHOOSE A PATROL)

To mark the 70th Anniversary of their Patrol 4x4, Nissan are highlighting a selection of 'Patrol Legends' – a special few who love the rugged off-roader and wouldn't choose anything else.

Nissan's legendary Patrol is celebrating its 70th anniversary in 2021. That's seven decades of exploring some of the world's most hard-to-reach places with comfort, capability and style.

To celebrate this momentous occasion, Nissan Australia have reached out to Patrol owners from around Australia, finding those who are doing incredible things with their vehicles.

Nissan calls them 'Patrol Legends,' and they don't come much more legendary than Noel Maynard from Proserpine, between Bowen and Mackay in Queensland.

A MILLION GOOD REASONS

Noel has more reason than most to be happy with his Patrol, as he has clocked over a million kilometres in the vehicle, which would be enough to drive to the moon and back, with about 250,000kms to spare.

Noel's Patrol shows no signs of slowing down, although the official logging of further kilometres might prove a challenge.

"[The odometer] didn't quite make the million," he says. "It got to 999,999kms, but it won't click over!"

Noel purchased his Series IV GU Patrol in 2005, and in those early years, the kilometres came slowly. It wasn't until he began using his vehicle as a Wide Load Pilot Escort — the vehicles that lead and follow wide-load trucks on Australia's highways — that the numbers really started soaring.

"I'm a Pilot Escort, which means I'm either behind or out front of oversized loads," Noel explains. "We're the safety precaution to let other road users know that there's an over-dimension vehicle of some description coming towards them."

SLOW BUILD UP AND LONG JOURNEYS

Noel bought the Patrol featured, a 4.2 turbodiesel DX cab chassis, new in 2005, and slowly built up the kilometres in the first decade of ownership: "By 2013, I had roughly 180,000kms on it. But from then to now, I've put another 850,000kms on."

Work as a Pilot Escort means Noel spends many hours and many kilometres behind the wheel.

If you're the type of person who gets antsy going on any car journey that lasts longer than three or four hours, spare a thought for Noel, who's driven further - and slower - than most people ever will.

"I've done a job from Kalkallo, just on the northern side of Melbourne, through to Cairns [2775km] - that was one job," he says.

"Doing the work I'm doing, I clock up anywhere between 100,000 to 130,000 kilometres a year. It doesn't take long to clock 'em up!"

In all the time that Noel's been on those important - and long! - Pilot Escort jobs, the Patrol's never broken down: "(When) you're on a schedule, a reliable vehicle is everything."

Over the years, Noel's accessorised his Patrol with an aftermarket bullbar, winch, driving lights, brush rails, side mirror extenders, wheels and tyres, as well as a custom tray and service body. There's also the kit needed for Pilot Escort work, like beacons, communications equipment (to keep in touch with the other pilot vehicles) and identifying signage.

A STRONG PERFORMER

Still going strong after 16 years, Noel's Patrol is a true testament to the vehicle's incredible staying power. Noel says that putting his faith in the Patrol was an easy choice, especially since it wasn't his first time behind the wheel of one.

He also never misses a service, whether it's the minor maintenance he carries out himself at home, or one of his regular visits to the service department at Rod Grittner Nissan in Proserpine.

"I had a Nissan Patrol before this one, and I put 300,000 kilometres on it," says Noel. "You go back to something that you know you can trust."

"As I've said to a lot of people now, if I'm not there, you better send a search party, because something's wrong with me!"

"The Nissan Patrol is it for me. I've bought a second one now so I can take this one off the road at some point in the future - not because it has broken down, just because of the kilometres, so I can do the maintenance on it."

LIFE ON THE ROAD

For a man who has seen more of Australia - and knows more about life on the road - than just about anyone, Noel is adamant he's still happiest when taking his Patrol out for another long-distance adventure.

"People ask 'Don't you get sick of driving?', but it's all I've done for years now," he says.

"I'd rather be out on the road looking through a windscreen than sitting inside an office looking at four walls."

"You've got to love driving!"

Noel had a Patrol before this one and has recently bought his third.

The value of regular dealer servicing has been proven by the longevity of Noel's Patrol.

QUEENSLAND CARAVAN CLUB INC. The Queensland Caravan Club (QCC) was established in 1949 with the aim of bringing together like-minded people who enjoy the spirit of caravanning and companionship. Although the Club membership has quite a diverse range of age groups, vocations and interests, members share a common love of the outdoors and of the freedom to explore Australia in a caravan. Each month, the Club meets at organised rallies usually within 200 kilometres of Brisbane which are planned 12 months in advance. Attendance at rallies is generally between 50 and 100 caravans where members relax in an informal and friendly atmosphere and enjoy a variety of social activities. After giving the Jeep Wrangler a military-inspired makeover, Italian company Militem recently turned their attention to the Gladiator, producing the FEROX-T. Based on the Gladiator Rubicon 3.6 V6, features on the FEROX-T include 20-inch wheels with Cooper A/T tyres, a 2-inch lift, adjustable suspension, custom grille, 'wide body' wheelarch flares, a dual-mode exhaust system, retractable side steps and a sports bar with retractable LED spotlights. Militem also line the tub in "high tech nautical material" and completely retrim the interior in a choice of fabrics, including fine Italian leather, Alcantara or even denim!

4x4 DIRECTORY

Find your next 4x4 or SUV with our detailed guide to what's available in Australian new car dealerships.*

DATA & RESEARCH Juliette Remfrey

We've listed in this section every offroader in the new vehicle market in Australia – this includes softroaders.

A few things to know before you read:

- How to use – this is a guide for you to see what's in the market, rather than get highly detailed specs on every car. Have a browse here, then research in more detail via the manufacturer websites or dealer.
- Accuracy of data – for many vehicles there are many combinations of trim, engine, specification... You name it. If we tried to list every possible combination, the guide would be too long, so we've just listed representative figures in each case, mostly split by engine type.
- Towing – remember that the figure quoted is the BRAKED tow weight for which you'll need an electric brake controller.

* Sections in this listing are updated periodically, but may not reflect current prices and specifications. Last update September 2020. Contact your relevant new car dealer for latest pricing and specifications.

What the table means:

SPEC*	WHAT IT MEANS?
Make & model	Who made it and the model. Not every possible sub-model will be listed, only a range.
Model	Model or variant
Capacity kW/Nm	4/2.8/147/410 – 4 cylinder, 2.8L capacity, 147kW (power), 410Nm (torque)
4x4 system	On-demand – drives the front wheels, rear wheels come in as required. May include a lock system which brings the rear wheels in quicker. AWD – all wheel drive, drives all wheels all the time. Part-time – 2WD on road, 4WD offroad.
Transmission	A – auto, M – manual, LR – low range (yes, no, optional). A and M list number of gears, or CVT for autos. N/L if a transmission is not available.
Suspension	IFS – independent front suspension. IRS – independent rear suspension. Coil, leaf, air – types of spring. Beam – beam, or solid/live axle. A-O – air optional, H-A – height adjustable (non-air).
Weights	Kerb – "empty" weight as quoted by the manufacturer, typically includes fluids and fuel but no load or accessories. (T) = Tare weight when kerb weight is unknown or not supplied GVM – Gross Vehicle Mass, maximum the vehicle can weigh. Payload – how much it can carry, difference between GVM and payload. Tow – braked tow capacity. Weights representative.
Safety	If tested, the ANCAP safety rating. 5 stars is the maximum.
Economy	Consumption – the figure quoted is the official ADR81/01 figure. Tank – size in litres. Range – based on 90% of the fuel tank size and the ADR81/10 figure.
Price	Representative list price, without, on-road costs (ORC). Visit the manufacturer website for a price based on your location, and the specific variant you select.

SOFTROADERS

Vehicles designed for light-duty offroading.

The first plug-in hybrid version of Volkswagen's Touareg SUV has been approved for the Australian market and will come here in late 2022.

Replacing the discontinued Touareg turbo diesel V8, the 'Touareg R' combines a 250kW/450Nm 3.0-litre turbo petrol V6 engine with a 100kW/400Nm electric motor for a combined 340kW and 700Nm.

Drive goes to all four wheels via an eight-speed automatic, with a 47km range and 135km/h speed available on electric power alone, while full charge of the 14.3kWh battery is possible in 2.5 hours.

VW Australia says further details, including pricing, will be announced soon.

OFFROADERS

Vehicles designed for offroad use.

The LandCruiser 300 Series was officially launched in October, with Toyota claiming the all-new 4x4 takes capability, durability and reliability to a new level.

Riding on the Toyota New Global Architecture platform and with a new exterior design, the 300 Series also features a new powerplant in the form of a 3.3-litre twin-turbo diesel V6, which is matched to a ten-speed automatic transmission. A new transfer case reduces time between high- and low-range changes, while a locking centre diff is standard across a range that includes GX, GXL, VX, Sahara and new Sahara ZX and GR Sport variants.

Pricing starts at $89,990 for the GX, rising to $138,790 for the Sahara ZX.

Mazda are updating their BT-50 range with the addition of a new 'SP' grade that's due for local release in January. Positioned above the GT and only available in dual cab ute form, the BT-50 SP adds a number of cosmetic touches, including gloss black wheelarch flares, mirrors and door handles, satin black 18-inch alloys, a black grille, dark grey roof rails and side steps, a sailplane-style sports bar, roller tonneau cover and tub liner. Inside, the SP features a combination of 'driftwood' leather and black synthetic suede trim. Full specs and pricing will be announced closer to local release.
